Setting: Jessica has just arrived at work and uses her badge to enter the front door. She sees another female coming behind her and holds the door for them. She makes sure the door closes before Deshawn, an African American male who works there, gets to the door. Once Deshawn is in the building, Jessica immediately asks him if he has a badge, and an uncomfortable conversation takes place.

1. I am sorry, but I did not see that you had a badge before entering this building. This is a secure building; only people with badges can enter at this hour.
3. She looks like she works here. I have never seen you before. Now can I see your badge?
5. If you don't show me your badge, I will tell the security officer and he will escort you out of this building.
7. (Walks away towards security officer) Excuse me Security this man does not belong here.

Name: DeShawn Wilson
Pronoun: He, Him, His
Age: Late 20;s
Race/Ethnicity: Black
Location: City of Somewhere Department of Everywhere

Setting: Deshawn is arriving at work and is reaching in his pocket to grab his badge so he can use it to get into his building. When he reaches the door he sees Jessica holding the door for another female co worker. Deshawn enters behind them by using his badge and then puts it in his pocket as he walks in. Jessica who did not see him use his badge asked him to prove he belongs in this building.

2. I work here. And did you ask the person you just let in before me to see their badge or are you only asking me?
4. Do you know her personally? Have you seen everyone who works here to know who belongs here and who doesn't? No, I will not show you my badge, excuse me I need to get to work.
6. Whatever. Since we have been standing here, several people have come in this door and you have yet to question any of them. So feel free to talk to the security officer. In the meantime, I will be using MY BADGE to access this elevator and go to work.
