Sexual Orientation: Heterosexual

Setting: Jeff is a salesman at Tree woods Apartment Complex. It's the end of the month and he's trying to get a few more sales in. Song Ki walks in, frustrated.

1. Alright, everything looks good and in order. We just have one more set of papers to sign and we'll be done.
3. I'm sure. Really quickly, on this line, I need you to write the names of anyone else who'll be living in the apartment with you.
5. Yes, but the person needs to be present to be added to the lease.
7. Oh if it's a roommate, then you can send in a check but leave the lease under your name.
9. Partner as in friend or partner as insignificant other?
11. (Negative attitude change) Ohhhh...I see.
13. Well, I need to double check our availability and ask my manager about "something". We're filling up pretty quickly. You do understand?

Sex: Male

Race/Ethnicity: Korean

Sexual Orientation: Homosexual

Setting: Apartment. Song Ki just landed a job working for the City. Song Ki is looking for an apartment for himself and his partner. This is his 5th potential apartment visit today and he's frustrated.

2. Great! You can't imagine how today has been for me.
4. That's fine are there forms I need to sign if there will be an additional person on the lease?
6. Hold on I'll get him to come over he's across the street.
8. Oh, no, he's my partner and we wanted both names on the lease.
10. Significant Other.
12. So, can I take the forms home for him to sign?
14. Yeah. I understand. I understand that your tone changed when I said significant other. I know what you're thinking. He's my lover and I'm damn proud to say it. Is there someone else I can talk to?
